Marvin Jones Will Talk on Bill Passed by Congress To Conserve Water in Panhandle

GOVERNORS TO COME

Citizens Are Urged to Attend Meeting and to Hear Plans For Water Conservation

One of the largest and most representative crowds ever assembled at Amarillo is expected for that city on Wednesday, Sept. 8, at which time a meeting of the Panhandle Water Conservation Association, and similar groups from the five-state dust bowl area will pay honor to Congressman Marvin Jones and other Senators and Representatives of the Southwest for the work done on the water and soil conservation program at the recent session of Congress, according to John McCarty, president of the Panhandle body.

The meeting will begin at ten o'clock in the morning of September 8th, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Herring Hotel, and will include a barbecue at Jack Hall's Ranch at noon, and a program in the afternoon.

Governors to Attend

The Governors of the five states have been invited to be present, and it is believed that most of the Congressmen and Senators from the Southwest will be in attendance.

W. A. Warren requests all who wish to attend this meeting to notify him by Monday as a list of delegates is requested by Amarillo. Those who attend will register at the Herring Hotel to receive free tickets for the barbecue.

The meeting will hear the report of Carl Hinton, Secretary-Manager of the Panhandle Water Conservation Association, who was recently delegated by the five-state conference at Amarillo to aid in securing legislation for the semi-arid part of the nation. It is also expected that definite plans will be discussed for carrying out the program with the greatest possible dispatch now that legislation and funds have been secured which will enable the program to be put into effect.

Officials of the Association are urging as strong an attendance as possible, especially of Commission-

Marvin Jones Asks Members Committee Hear Farmers

Congressman Marvin Jones, chairman of the House Agricultural Committee, has issued the following statement regarding the new bill which will be presented to the next session of congress:

I have requested each member of the House Committee on Agriculture to hold conferences, during the recess, with the farmers of his particular district, and, in so far as possible, with the farmers of his state, in reference to general farm legislation.

There are 25 members of the House committee on Agriculture, representing as many different states. Every different part of the nation is thus represented.

We have asked each of the four major farm groups to submit to us the provisions that they feel should be included in the measure. They have indicated their willingness to do so and some of them have already submitted their suggestions.

We have planned for the Committee to return to Washington a month before the convening of the next session, for the purpose of endeavoring to have legislation ready for the consideration of the Congress soon after it assembles.

IS THE NEW DEAL WEAKENING?

Congress adjourned last week in the midst of the greatest confusion the lawmaking body has experienced in years.

Political observers predicted before the session started that the President could not control the lopsided Democratic majority which maintained in both the House and the Senate. The breaking away from the executive influence was predicted, but not to the extent which actually took place.

Is the New Deal faltering?

Many a citizen asks himself that question.

Has the President lost his grip on Congress?

The same number of citizens wonder.

Will the President whip the Democratic majority into line in the coming session?

Most of us wonder.

Anti-New Dealers are most jubilant. They believe that the Democratic party is split wide open, and that the Republicans will have easy sailing in the congressional races next year and in the presidential campaign in 1940.

Perhaps they are counting their votes too soon.

So far as splitting the party is concerned, wasn't the Democratic party split when Al Smith and his Liberty Leaguers decided to take a walk? Didn't all of the disgruntaled Democrats, including the so-called Jeffersonian Democrats, split the party when they joined Al Smith and tried to elect a weak Republican, Alf Landon?

Who started this splitting of the party? Certainly the President cannot be charged with splitting the party, which was accomplished so drastically in Washington when the Liberty Leaguers threw open the gates and bolting Democrats marched into the billionaire fold.

At any rate, all Democrats, especially those who wish to back the President, are going to face the personal responsibility of self examination pretty quick to see how they shall be classed in 1938. When election time comes around next year, you will find that 50% of those rearin', bold buckin', congressmen who caused so much trouble in this off-election year's session of congress will again be willing to swing onto the President's coat-tail and ride back into office. That is, if by that time it is evident that the President is still as strong with the people as he has been in the past.

Once, responding to a Canadian newspaper correspondent, President Roosevelt defined the New Deal's social objectives in these words:

". . . To do what any honest government of any country would do; to try to increase the security and the happiness of a larger number of people in all occupations of life and in all parts of the country; to give them more of the good things of life; to give them a greater distribution not only of wealth in the narrow terms but of wealth in the wider terms; to give them places to go in the summer time—recreation; to give them assurance that they are not going to starve in their old age; to give honest business a chance to go ahead and make a reasonable profit, and to give everyone a chance to earn a living."

In those simple words, the President expressed not only his philosophy, but the philosophy of every citizen who wishes the best for his nation.

Our government should strive toward the objectives he stated, for economic as well as for humanitarian reasons. The ability of the American people to buy and enjoy the good things of life must keep pace with our capacity to produce. Thus can we attain sure prosperity, an ever-increasing production and distribution of wealth, security and happiness.

We have not attained them—yet.

But we started on our way during the New Deal's first phase. That phase demanded emergency action and bold leadership—to conquer the depression, to banish despair, to restore confidence, to make economic recovery possible. The President provided that action, that leadership.

The second phase, essential if the New Deal is to be an enduring institution and not merely a passing incident in American life, will call for a different technique. Time and care must be taken to correct the unavoidable errors of haste, to strengthen the foundations laid and build on them a lasting structure of law, to hold the gains we have and make further advances possible.

That, too, will demand leadership from the President—but co-operative rather than dictatorial leadership. No less important, it also will demand from Congress a renewed sense of its co-ordinate responsibility. The New Deal cannot go forward if the President resorts to reprisals against congressmen of independent thought. For that reason we hope and trust Senator Guffey's vindictive speech does not reflect the President's attitude.

The unfortunate session of Congress just ended should have seen the New Deal moving well into its second phase.

But Congress had barely settled down to work when the President proposed a plan to reform the Supreme Court. Impatient because a reactionary court majority had blocked his program, he chose what he thought was the handiest way of breaking that obstruction. Many loyal New Dealers, in and out of Congress, could not follow him on that proposal. They honestly believed the proposed method of so-called court packing would establish a precedent dangerous, if not fatal, to our constitutional form of government.

In the long and bitter fight that followed, measures vital to the New Deal were neglected. Congress had no heart for its work. A few hasty legislative compromises were rushed through after the court plan was defeated, but none of them was wholly satisfactory. None of them made much propress toward the New Deal's objectives.

Well, all that is past. It can be, and should be forgotten. When Congress returns to Washington, in the clearer, cooler atmosphere of fall or early winter, statesmanship will have another chance to take the helm.

Many a patriotic and fair minded citizen suddenly found themselves opposed to the program of the President during the past session of congress, although they agreed with him in principle.

Many were conscientiously opposed to the court reform measure, believeing it a bad thing for the nation.

Many were opposed to the wage-hours legislation, fearing further bureaucracy in government.

Freedom in spending, and failure to balance the budget brought condemnation of other good friends of the administration.

Others feared the tax tinkering bill which was rushed through with little consideration.

There are, also, those wailers at the walls of precedent and tradition who loudly lament the thought of a precedent smashing third term. Right here is presented a fine piece of irony. Where were these weepers in March, 1933, when the President began his precedent wrecking career by slamming down a bank holiday and rescuing the country from financial shipwreck? Would these mourners be willing to experience a return of the conditions under which the nation reeled and shuddered during the dark closing days of 1932 and the cold gray dawn of 1933? Would the farmers be content to surrender their gains, the old people their pensions, the workers their jobs, the bond holders their dividends, the manufacturers their markets and the investors their profits? Would all of these, or any of us, for that matter, merely for the sake of a cherished tradition or precedent, willingly risk seeing again the pre-Roosevelt state of affairs, when the nights were just sleepless black spaces sandwiched in between gray jobless days? Would John Smith of today be easily induced to swap places with John Smith of 1932?

Honest criticism of the President will not hurt either Mr. Roosevelt or his program. Constructive criticism should be healthy to his future plans.

So far as Canyon and Randall county are concerned, we believe ours to be a typical example of every community in the nation. Had we not had a far-sighted, big hearted, fair minded President, we are fearful that without a program as far-reaching as the New Deal, there would have been little left in this community from the ravages of the depression and drouth. We are firmly convinced that the President saved this community from a desperate situation which makes one tremble to anticipate.

Considering all that has taken place, are we still for the New Deal?

The answer is: WE ARE.

Many may ask if we expect to support the President through the remainder of his administration. Most certainly. We believe Mr. Roosevelt's finest opportunities are still before him. We believe in his ability to overcome the mistakes that he and his advisers have made. Having seen his great achievements in the past, we believe he can achieve greater things in the future.

Most certainly we stand for the New Deal.

Taxation is the great big problem confronting all branches of government. Local bodies need more taxes to carry on the program carved out for them by the local people. The State of Texas needs more money to carry on the work the people are demanding from the legislature. The federal government needs more money to balance the budget and keep the government running. In time of plenty, it would be a fine thing if governments could do as individuals are forced to do—put away a little for the rainy days to come. But government is not run on that theory. Governments spend all, or nearly all the money on hand. The people would not appreciate seeing a great balance piled up, even if those in authority were so far sighted as to prepare for the lean days which are certain to come.

Astute Roy Miller suggests John Garner as the most logical man to succeed President Roosevelt. Texas would be glad to support the Vice President. Throughout his long public career, he has been one of the most successful statesmen the nation has ever produced. Just now he is in the roll of peace maker between the waring factions of congress and the President. If he succeeds in bringing harmony in the Democratic party, John Garner has an excellent chance for the nomination if the President decides to quit at the end of his second term.

We trust that the legislature will never again make the mistake of submitting constitutional amendments in a special election. Only about 125,000 of the million voters of the state took the time to go to the polls. What a tragedy that the fundamental laws of the state should command such meagre interest.

Does Japan intend bringing on another world war? The crafty Japs are far sighted. If they think they can line up sufficient backing to make a world war profitable to them, look out. A most dangerous situation exists in Asia. While sympathy of the leading powers are with China, the dangers involved in another war are such as to make all nations cautious, and Japan bold.

'Atta cop! . . . sending people right where you should —here to my station. Because the only real official Mileage Merchant is a CONOCO Mileage Merchant like me. I sure appreciate half a dozen cars from different states driving in this morning already. But let me tell you. Being in business for myself here, my surest living is from always pleasing the homefolks. And they're just as sold as any long distance tourist, on having the engine Oil-Plated by my Conoco Germ Processed oil. You know the way Oil-Plating is altogether different from anything else. It holds on like a leech, where all the worst wear used to come in the engine. Can't drain off the working parts. Then it can't leave any spots without oil . . . not even while the car is standing still . . . nor all the while it's spinning along on the hottest day. This Oil-Plating is really like a long-lasting part of the engine. Then where's any chance for too much wear, or needing more oil all the time? And there you are . . . people notice all their mileage and the way the engine keeps quiet and cool from Oil-Plating. That's how I've got them picking me out for their Mileage Merchant.

Foreign Invaders Threaten U. S. Pilots in Gold Cup Boat Races at Detroit

BY IRVING DIX

ONCE again the sports fans' appetite for speed and more speed will be satiated by the knights of the roaring motor, who on land, water or in the air, provide the thrills which ride only on the thunder of an exhaust line and the whistle of the wind.

For the 34th time, the daredevils who crouch low behind the wheel and feel the sting of cold spray being whipped back into their faces, will pilot their speedy crafts over the Detroit river at Detroit, Labor Day, in this year's renewal of the colorful Gold Cup races.

And for the first time since its inception in 1904, the famed event will take on an international aspect, with foreign boats being allowed to enter because of a concession made by the American Power Boat Association. Every foreign boat entered, according to the ruling must be affiliated with some American yacht club.

Count Theo Rossi of Italy, one of the leading contenders, has listed his two boats, Alagi and Aradam, under the colors of the Oakland, Calif., Yacht Club while Maurice Vasseur of France will fly the pennant of the Detroit Yacht Club.

IN all probability the speed will be stepped up considerably over that of last year, when slightly more than 47 miles an hour was the best Horace Dodge's Impshi could do in winning the event.

Early in August Count Rossi's Alagi was clocked in a fraction over 90 miles an hour in a practice run over Lake Maggiore, near Stressa, Italy. And Aradam was caught just a little under that incredible speed.

The three boats entered by the Frenchman Vasseur are capable of doing 70 miles an hour, all of which only adds to the distressing problem confronting the Americans.

Heading the list of home-grown entries will be the 1936 winner, Impshi, and another Dodge boat, Delphine IX. Both craft have revealed new speed and power in tune-up runs on the Detroit river, but experts show no great enthusiasm over their chances to skim home ahead of the foreign starters.

Notre Dame, piloted by Cell Perry, is another nominee who may turn in a surprise performance to capture the historic as well as beautiful gold cup—but a big surprise, indeed, it would be, if she succeeded.

MISS MAUD RUTHERFORD, the only feminine entrant in the event, will handle Ma Ja II: E. A. Wilson's Canadian hope. Miss Canada II, rounds out the sixth and last of the foreign challengers.

The Gold Cup course, laid out in the Detroit river between Belle Isle and the mainland, is three miles long, with two lengthy straightaways and a pair of sharp turns at the east and west ends.

The race will be run in three heats, with each to be 30 miles, or 10 laps. The ultimate winner will be determined by the point system on heat positions.

Shelter Belt Rules Announced by U. S. Forest Service

By the U. S. Forest Service

The primary purpose of the shelter belt plantings is to protect soil from wind erosion. Aside from this, these belts will supply fuel and posts in later years, furnish protection for livestock, conserve soil moisture, furnish cover and food for wild life, protect growing crops, improving living conditions, and in other ways contribute to the general well being of the region.

The plantings will be planned to give the maximum benefit to the individual farms on which they are located, but by far the best results are obtained by grouping belts on a number of adjoining farms. In other words, your planting will be more valuable to you if your neighbors also plant shelter belts. In order to secure the most from the planting and to assure its success, certain requirements must be observed, most important of which are:

1. LOCATION. Plantings will be located where, in the opinion of the Forest Service and the land owner, they will give maximum protection to fields. This will usually be in an east and west direction along the south or north edge of the field.

2. SIZE OF THE BELTS. The plantings will be about 7 rods wide, consisting of 10 to 13 rows of trees and shrubs. A strip of less than one-half mile in length will not be considered unless it is limited by ground conditions or it would be a continuation of another planting.

2. SOIL. Plantings will not be made where it is determined that the soil is not suitable for tree growth.

4. TREES AND PLANTING. The trees will be furnished and planted by the Forest Service without charge. After planting the trees will become the property of the land owner. However, the land owner must agree not to remove or sell the young trees.

5. CARE AND PROTECTION. The land owner agrees to exclude all livestock from the planted area. For this purpose, the land owner will furnish the fencing materials necessary for constructing a minimum standard two-wire fence with posts not more than 20 feet apart. The Forest Service will furnish the labor for constructing the fence.

6. GROUND PREPARATION FOR PLANTING. The land owner must prepare the ground for planting in a manner acceptable to the government.

7. CULTIVATION. Proper cultivation is essential in successfully establishing and growing trees. Since the trees become the property of the land owner after planting, it will be his responsibility to provide this necessary care. The government may, if funds permit, assist with cultivation, when an emergency exists.

Snoop—I hear that Jones left everything to the orphan asylum.

Sling—What did he leave.

Snoop—Two boys.

Percy (timidly)—I have half a mind to kiss you.

Roberts—If you had a whole mind you'd have done it an hour ago.

CASE Fluted Force Feed Drills sow uniformly, both in depth and spacing. Seed passes freely and steadily down from the hoppers into the furrow bottom. Every seed counts—none wasted—no cracked seed; no skips; and no bunches.

Greater seeding accuracy is provided by the compression spring that holds fluted roll firmly against cut-off roll. Takes up wear; prevents seed crowding between these parts. Holds fluted roll in position set by seed indicator. Leaves adjustment for different rates of seeding.

Sturdily built—hoppers, feeds and gears factory assembled and "run in" before shipment. Case Double Run Feed is equally accurate. Come in and see these popular drills.

Fairs Show Increase in Popularity With Advent of Educational Motive

Scenes like the one above, showing farm girls participating in a dairy-maid contest, will be familiar at hundreds of county fairs all over the United States. A popular part of most fairs is the harness racing program, such as shown at left.

PRIZE-WINING plums, preserves, and out-size pumpkins vie for attention with beribboned "bluebloods" from the pasture and stable.

Pretty dairy maids, showing the folks "how it's done," compete with the shrill-voiced invitations of the midway barker.

Gay-colored ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds, kewpie doll stands, and home-made taffy, pulled for your own benefit—all those things and hundreds of others may be found at the county fair.

The development of the American fair makes an interesting page in history. It reflects the expansion and improvement of farming methods throughout the nation more than any other agency.

Yet the survival and actual increase in popularity of the county fair in this fast-moving 20th century appears astonishing.

Instead of this rural endeavor waning it is gaining strength. Today there are approximately 3000 district, state and county fairs in North America, held in practically every state in the Union and in every month of the year. They range from the February carnivals in Florida, to the July fairs in California and western Canada, and the early fall fairs of the east and midwest.

ONE of the outstanding reasons for this increased interest is the desire for education. No longer is the county fair arranged with the sole motive of selling livestock and farm produce, as it was in the early days.

That was the original idea of the rural fairs, which, patterned after similar shows in Europe, first made their appearance in the American colonies as early as 1644.

The second, and more powerful motive was that of education. And to Elkanah Watson, prominent gentleman farmer of Albany, N. Y., in the early years of the 19th century, goes the title of "Father of the County Fair." It was Watson who outlined the first idea for the Berkshire cattle show near Albany, which in 1810 became the forerunner of the present-day county fair.

Watson's ideas spread, and soon Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, as well as New York, began to grant small subsidies for county and district fairs.

The county fair in many agricultural centers today is the biggest civic event of the year, anticipated with even more enthusiasm than the Fourth of July and other holidays. School children are prompted and encouraged to try for prizes and premiums. Farmers devote special acreage to certain crops in an effort to win one of the many awards offered.

THE spirit of competition turns work into play. The county fair to many people in agricultural counties is a game from which they derive real pleasure.

The modern farmer likes his fun as well as anyone, and the increases in attendance, as well as exhibits and the premiums offered indicate his ability to pay for it.

Egg Production Improved From Progeny Testing

Of the three methods used to improve egg production—trap-nesting, pedigrees and progeny testing—the last is by far the most important, on the basis of tests by Department of Agriculture poultrymen at the National Agriculture Research Center, Beltsville, Md.

Cockerels of good ancestry, as well as high-producing hens, vary in their ability to transmit good egg production to their progeny. A male with high-egg ancestry has a better chance of begetting high-producing females than a male from low-producing stock and a cockerel whose full sisters are laying well carries promise as a valuable breeder. But most poultrymen who win consistently in egg-laying contests use cockerels whose daughters are known to be good egg producers.

Among selected Rhode Island Red cockerels used at Beltsville, only one in six was worth keeping for a second year of breeding on the basis of egg laying in their pullets.

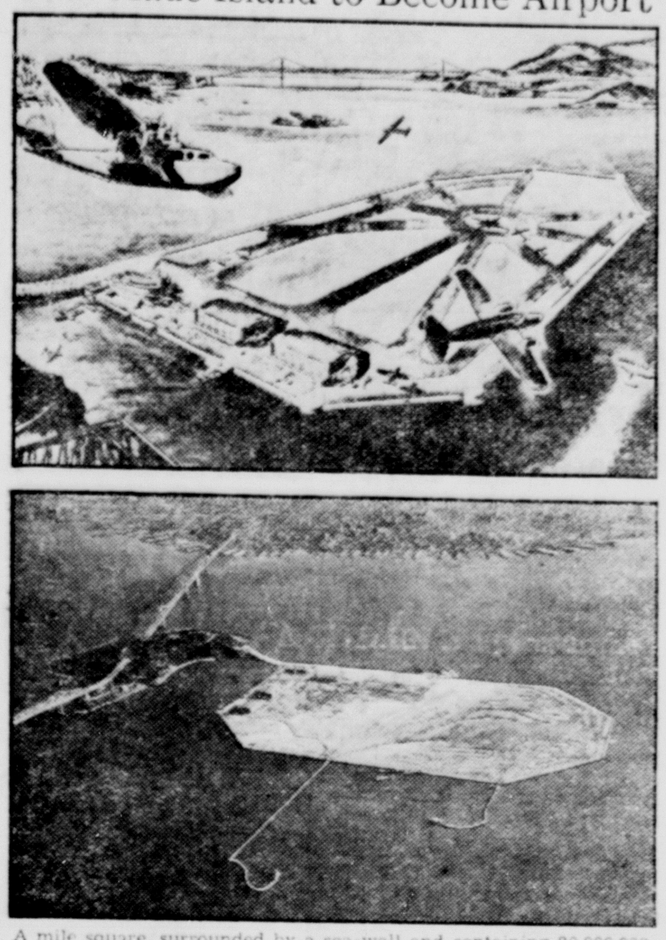
Man-Made Island to Become Airport



A mile square, surrounded by a sea-wall and containing 20,000,000 cubic yards of sand, the island in San Francisco bay, bottom picture, is considered to be the largest man-made island in the world. Although it was built principally to serve as the site for San Francisco's 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition, it ultimately will be turned into a $7,000,000 municipal airport to serve a population of 2,000,000 in surrounding cities. An architect's sketch of the finished airport appears in the top picture. The famous San Francisco-Oakland bridge may be seen in the left background.

Primitive Areas Well-Named, Says Forest Service

"Primitive areas" in the National forests are well named, the Forest Service thinks. Widely scattered over the United States, the 67 primitive areas preserve samples of the country as it was originally, untouched by the complexities of modern civilization. No roads or highways enter.

There are no settlements, summer homes, or resorts. Visitors must make their way on foot or on horseback over back-country trails, if trails exist. These areas offer quiet, solitude, relief from a mechanical age, and an opportunity to observe nature under as nearly primitive conditions as is possible nowadays.

The largest of the primitive areas contains more than 1,000,000 acres; the smallest only 5,000 acres; all of them together 11,322,791 acres. In these areas are parts of the Olympics, Cascades, Coast Range, Sierra Nevada, Uintas, Continental Divide, Rockies and other lesser mountain chains. One of the largest embraces some of the lake country along the international boundary in northern Minnesota.

"No one can foretell the degree to which the resources of these areas will be required to meet the future economic and social needs of the people of the United States," says L. F. Kneipp of the Forest Service. "It may be that their woods and waters, their minerals, their wealth of palatable forage eventually will be needed to maintain industry and commerce, to afford dependent local populations means of continuing their economic existence. But, so far as can now be foreseen, these areas indefinitely can be maintained in their present primitive conditon, with benefit and advantage to the people of the United States greater than could be realized by more intensive industry utilization or by penetrating their hidden recesses with high-speed roads, or by encouraging large numbers of people to occupy them with summer homes and related facilities.

"Go on," he remarked teasingly, "if I were to die tomorrow you'd marry again in no time."

And he went back to his work feeling real happy.

"The Rest of the Record"

BY JAMES V. ALLRED
Governor of Texas

Several months ago, when the industrial North and East were paralyzed with sit-down strikes, I issued a statement that we were not going to have any confiscation of property in that fashion down here in Texas. I said I was convinced that the sit-down strike method did not represent the desires of an overwhelming majority of organized labor in our State; and that while I was and had always been friendly to organized labor, it was "un-American and unlawful to sit down on somebody's property and try to remain there." If a man wants to quit a job, or strike, he has a perfect right peacefully to do so; but after quitting he has no more right to sit down on property or premises without permission than he would have to sit down in a private home uninvited.

The people of Texas approved of my statement because it represented the sentiments of an overwhelming majority of them. We haven't had any sit-down strikes in Texas and have had very little labor troubles as compared to other states.

Now another unfortunate situation has devedloped. Recently in Dallas a man who was trying to show a pro-labor picture in a public park was kidnapped and taken out into the country by a bunch of hoodlums who tarred and feathered him. Another labor organizer was kidnapped and beaten so brutally that he was laid up in the hospital for over a week. Other outrages of a lesser nature were perpetrated and threats were freely being made as to what wsa going to be done with labor organizers.

Everyone concedes that labor has a right to organize and to select organizers and leaders of their own choosing. The freedom of speech and the right to assemble peacefully are guaranteed by both State and Federal Constitutions. The brutal treatment accorded these men in Dallas is indefensible. I recall a few years ago when the unfortunate Ku Klux epidemic broke out and many men were taken from their homes at night and flogged because they had violated the laws. The people of Texas rose up in their might and took the position that even if a man had violated the law that he was entitled to trial in a courthouse and not in a creek bottom. Today it isn't even claimed that the men who were kidnapped or tarred and feathered were violating any law. All that was said by those who perpetrated the outrages was that the men belonged to the CIO. It isn't a violation of the laws of our country for these men to belong to the CIO, regardless of what we may thing of that organization.

In my opinion, it is just as important to protect people from outrages of this kind as to prevent the taking of property from the rightful owners by the sit-down strike or other unlawful method. Because I didn't want to see the thing get started again in Texas I immediately sent twenty-five members of the State police to Dallas with instructions to protect men in their right to speak freely and to assemble lawfully. These officers are instructed not to take sides in any controversy but simply to prevent violence on either side.

I was surprised to get a bunch of inspired telegrams apparantly approving the treatment given these organizers because, the telegrams said, they were members of the CIO. I don't care to what organization they belong. If they violate any law they ought to be prosecuted for it; but no set of men has the right to take the law into their own hands and kidnap, or beat, or tar and feather, these men. I think the people of Texas are backing me up in this stand.

Since the State police went to Dallas these troubles have practically ceased. I am very hopeful that the situation will adjust itself without any further trouble.

I really wish the general public could know in detail the many fine things that have been accomplished by the Public Safety Department. I am particularly proud of the intelligence branch. In this division we have fingerprint, handwriting, and ballistic experts. This has been a great help to local officers everywhere, and, of course, has materially assisted the State in dealing with the more hardened type of criminal.

Just as illustrative of what has been done in the one field of ballistic work: As perhaps most of you know men from this department can take a bullet that has been fired and trace it to the gun that fired it by markings on the bullet. They have done this in many instances and solved cases that mibht otherwise have gone down as "perfect crimes."

For instance, recently in one Texas town a man was murdered at night as he slept. He was not robbed, and officers were at a loss for a motive. They did, however find shotgun shells of a certain type. They picked up every gun of this caliber in the little town and fired some test shells from them and sent these test shells together with the ones found on the ground in to Austin. The fired shells from each gun had been numbered and the experts in the Public Safety Department shortly advised that the shell with a certain number on it was from the same gun as that which fired the shells found at the scene of the crime. It was no trouble to trace the ownership of this shotgun and its use to a negro in the community who promptly confessed the crime. This is just one of a number of similar cases that illustrate how quickly the department can assist your local officers.

Some time ago I had occasion to use the handwriting experts. The State of Illinois had asked for extradition papers on a prominent citizen of this State on a charge of forgery alleged to have been committed in Illinois. The notary public who took the acknowledgment in Illinois identified this citizen and in an affidavit asserted that he had seen him sign the instrument in question. While I was hearing the case I had the handwriting expert from the Public Safety Department to go over the alleged forged deed and compare it with samples of the defendant's handwriting; and before I could close the hearing these experts reported to me that without any question the defendant had not forged the deed. You can imagine how grateful these people were to our Department of Public Safety for the service, which cleared the name of a good citizen of Texas.

From time to time I shall try to tell you more of the work of this department and other departments of the State Government in which I think you may be interested.

"That's what the used-car dealer said to me when I brought in my old Jalopy. The paint and rubber were so-so. Upholstery, fair. But the engine? Marvelous! So he paid me way over the Blue-book value, and I've warned the family never to use any oil except Phillips 66 Motor Oil in our brand new bus."
The moral is: To keep your engine in tip-top condition, use the finest oil you can buy. Not the highest-priced oil, but a lubricant like Phillips 66 Motor Oil, which gives you more protection for every penny you pay. Guaranteed 100% pure paraffin base.
With high-degree oiliness. Standout quality makes it stand up longer. Tougher, heat-resistant film makes it give many extra miles of service.
Next time, drain and refill with Phillips 66 Motor Oil. It's concentrated! . . . This year's big value in car lubrication. Look for the Orange and Black 66 Shield.

Handling 2000-Pound Aerial Bomb

Possessing enough destructive force to completely demolish a large building, the 2000-pound aerial bomb, above, is delicately handled with a crane as members of the 10th Ordnance Service Company at Langley Field, Va., prepare to instruct men from various units of the air force in the loading of ammunition. Everything from deadly bombs the size of those shown stacked above, to signal flares will receive attention at the Ordnance school.

Band Prizes Are Offered During Tri-State Fair

Substantial cash prizes will be offered again this year to bands accompanied by delegations at The Tri-State Fair, September 20-25.

To the band with the largest delegation on the exposition grounds during any one day will go $75.

Second and third prizes will be $50 and $25.

Anyone in the county from which the band comes will be eligible to register.

The registration booth will be maintained in The Amarillo Globe-News display, located in the merchants' building.

Mason King, in charge of grandstand attractions for the Fair Association, has announced a plan for bands to defray expenses of the trip or to obtain funds for band libraries.

"Every band visiting the fair this year will be given 15 cents for each ticket sold to either the rodeo or the night show," explained Mr. King.

"Bandmasters or Chamber of Commerce officials are invited to write to me for the number of tickets they will want to sell," continued Mr. King.

The Tri-State Fair director said exposition officials would be hosts to all bands at one of the grandstand attractions.

"Cities are urged to select the day on which they will send delegations to the fair," added King.

Beutler Brothers of Elk City, Okla., will stage the rodeo each afternoon in front of the grandstand and each night there will be a special attraction, probably a beauty revue and musical comedy.

Al G. Barnes and Sells-Floto circus and Crowley's United Shows on the midway will be other attractions.

Mrs. Earl Robbins and son, Ray Robbins, returned Sunday from Independence, Kansas, where they spent a few days with friends.

Ace Stunt Flyer Hurt on Train

It must have been with a slight feeling of humility that Maj. Al Williams, above, went to a hospital in New York with an injured knee. The former navy speed king, shown smiling and pecking at his portable typewriter, while lying abed, has avoided injury any number of times in the air, but when the train jolted on a recent trip he went flying from his berth. He says he'll use a safety belt from now on.

Miss Virginia King of Perryton and Miss Nellie Freeman of Dumas arrived in town yesterday to make their living arrangements for the ensuing year. Both are members of the Canyon High School staff.

Buying of Trees to Be Discussed at Meeting Saturday

The Randall County Cemetery Association will meet at 3:30 Saturday afternoon in the court house. The president is very anxious for all members to be present, as a discussion will be held regarding the buying of trees for the new addition to the Cemetery.

Supervisors Stress Importance School Lunches, Clothing

School clothes, school lunches and fall gardens are the things uppermost in the present program of Mrs. Lillie B. McClure, county home management supervisor, with headquarters in Amarillo. Mrs. McClure works with all borrowers of the Resettlement Administration in Randall county in a comprehensive rehabilitation program.

Planning and advising with the farm women in this county, whose home making budgets were necessarily limited by conditions over which they had no control, is one of the major projects of the home management supervisors and with another school term near at hand she is emphasizing the importance of adequate clothing for school children, and well balanced school lunches.

Quoting from a Department of Agriculture bulletin Mrs. McClure says growing children have special needs in the way of food. Even when they eat all of their meals at home, it is no easy matter to see that they are properly fed, and when they eat part of their meals at school the difficulty is far greater This is not because healthfulness and cleanliness are more important in this meal than in any other, but because they are harder to secure. It is not easy to keep food clean and attractive when it must be packed and carried in a lunch basket. Nor is it easy to prepare meals in schools which are not specially fitted for the purpose.

Mrs. McClure points out that economy, warmth and durability are the keys for school clothing, although style and finish are by no means neglected. One particular item in this project is the making over of old garments until they look and wear almost like new ones.

She says the value of fall gardens is an important factor in a successful rehabilitation program because in addition to meeting dietary needs, they provde a valuable barrier against food costs.

ers Courts, farmers, ranchers, business men, county agents and any citizens interested in soil and water conservation.

Jones Is Back

Congressman Marvin Jones is back from Washington and started work Monday to get water conservation under way as quickly as possible. He has conferred with WPA and Resettlement Administration officials with a view of getting all details arranged so that work may start on the lakes and dams which are provided for in the bill which he passed through congress.

Red tape, which usually hampers WPA projects, will be cut or reduced to a minimum in order that there be no delay in getting work started.

Congressman Jones succeeded in passing through congress all of the farm relief bills which he sponsored in this session of congress and has been highly complimented for the success of his work.

Farms Should Plan

While the Randall County Planning Board has not yet received instructions to submit projects for lakes and dams, farmers and land owners are warned that projects may be called for soon after the meeting next Wednesday.

There will be a scramble for allotment of the money when the time comes to submit projects. Those who act first in getting their plans ready will be the ones to secure the lakes and dams.

Randall county land owners are advised to select possible sites for building lakes and dams on their land, and be prepared to submit these projects when the time comes. While no definite plan for projects has been announced, it is likely that land owners will be paid by the government for this work. This has been the plan followed in other states.

Resettlement has had men surveying the proposed Buffalo Dam south of Umbarger again during the past week, and since this project is marked No. 1 for action, it is likely that work will be started just as soon as all plans have been completed as to how the projects will be handled.

cards and report cards in order to speed up registration. He also strongly urges students to report for registration only at the time designated for their particular grade.

Among the new instructors in the Canyon schools are Mrs. Ralph Harter who will replace Miss Ruth Greenfield who resigned her position as teacher of one section of the third grade; Mrs. Carl Scott, who has been elected a full time teacher for the other section of the third grade; Miss Virginia King, who will teach Spanish and commercial subjects in the high school; Marshall Rienenschneider, who has been elected to succeed R. G. Stephenson as band director; and Miss Nellie Freeman, home economics.

School busses will run Saturday morning in order to bring pupils in for registration, and will return them as soon as registration has been completed, Mr. Carruth said.

School will open at 9 o'clock Monday morning with assembly in the auditorium of the high school. The public is invited to attend the opening exercises.

"We are very fortunate this year in having our good friends of the county schools join us in making the 1937-38 school term, perhaps, the outstanding year in the history of the school," Mr. Carruth said. Students from the following county schools will attend the Canyon schools this year: Palo Duro, Garrison, Jowell, Stone, Zita, Lakeside, Ralph and Tierra Blanca. "It has been our experience in the past to have some of our very best students come from the county schools," Mr. Carruth declared.

"Through such co-operation as this, Randall County will rapidly build one of the best county systems in the state," Mr. Carruth said. The faculty, board of trustees, and citizens of Canyon wish to welcome all these students and to assure them that everything possible will be done to make the school year both pleasant and profitable. One of the best balanced and best trained teaching staffs, together with a broad and comprehensive curriculum will be made available for their use, he said.

Mr. Carruth urges parents, especially parents of high school students, to accompany their children in order to assist them in selecting elective courses.

one of the three universities in the United States which offers a Ph. D. in physical education, and he will start work next summer on this degree.

Coach Bob Cox has been at W. T. during the summer keeping in touch with campus improvements and advising with the athletes.

The first game for the squad will be played on the night of September 17th with the Panhandle A. & M. College of Goodwell, Okla. The Aggies always have a good team, and while the farmers have never defeated the Buffs, a hard-fought clean game is always played.

WPA is making rapid progress with construction on the campus, and will complete the present projects early this fall. The laundry house and garage building are about ready to occupy. Practically all the work on Buffalo Courts has been completed. The Recreation Hall has a number of workmen finishing up this project. It is planned to start building the wall around the grandstand in a short time. The foundation was reinforced by WPA and is now ready for the additional wall.

IT LOOKS EASY, BUT IS IT?
(By Bruce Barton)

A friend, who is president of a company, tells me that fifty-nine concerns have engaged in the manufacture of watches in this country in the past hundred years, and that only three survive. The automobile industry has a similiar story. Count up some day the cars you can remember which are no more; it will surprise you.

There is no such thing as the terrible "profit system" against which the reformers make so much fuss. There is no "profit and loss system," and the losses in any industry, over a period of years, probably are greater than the profits. Making money is not easy. Since my graduation from college I have taken a speculative shot at about a dozen side-line businesses. They all looked very promising, but with one exception they were total flops.

Mrs. Chuzz (after hearing Sally playing hot swing tunes on the piano)—My dear young lady, have you ever heard of the Ten Commandments?

Sally—Whistle a few bars and I think I can follow you.
